Research by WNC surgeon on shoulder problems published

ASHEVILLE — Research led by local orthopedic surgeon Dr. Gordon I. Groh, recently published in the Journal of Shoulder and Elbow Surgery, will provide critical information for other specialists treating patients who require shoulder replacement surgery.

Dr. Gordon Groh

A board-certified specialist in shoulder, elbow and hand surgery at Blue Ridge Bone & Joint, with offices in Asheville and Hendersonville, Groh conducted two studies in which he examined the records of patients who had undergone shoulder replacement surgery, most often for shoulder arthritis.
